

WHAT DOES IT LOOK LIKE?

A: Hello. Can I help you?

B: Yeah, I'm looking for a toy for my son.

A: Ok, what kind of toy are you looking for?

B: He wants this airplane toy and I can't find it.

A: Hmm, Okay. What does it look like?

B: Well, it looks like an old-fashioned airplane.

It's kind of small, and made of metal.

A: Ah I see. Is this it?

B: Yes! Thank you!

A: Let me just check that we have them in stock.

A: Hello. Do you need help?

B: Yeah, we're looking for goggles.

A: Why do you need goggles?

B: Mr. Hamm the science teacher wants them.

A: Hmm, Okay. What do they look like?

B: He said they are made of plastic and glass. And they have something on the side to protect your eyes.

A: Ah I see. Here they are.

B: Great! Thank you so much.

A: No problem.

A: Hello Carlos. Do you need anything?

B: Yes, I want to get this thing but I forget what it's called in English.

A: Ok, well, what does it look like?

B: It's used for telling the temperature. It's long and made of glass and it's a little red.

A: Oh! You want a thermometer.

B: How do you say that?

A: Ther-mo-meter. Don't worry, they are right over here.

B: Thanks a lot. That's a big help.

A: Sure. Any time.

A: Hi Cho. Are you ok?

B: Yes, I want to get something but I forget what it's called in English.

A: Ok, well, what does it look like?

B: Well, they look like scissors. They are made of metal.

They are used for cutting really strong things like wire.

A: Oh! That's easy. Wire cutters.

B: Oh that's simple. Do you have any wire cutters?

A: Sure. Here you are.

B: Thank you so much.

A: Okay. I'm glad to help out.

WHAT DOES IT LOOK LIKE?

A: Julia? Can you do me a favor?

B: Sure Ms. Williams. What do you need?

A: Can you get a glass funnel from the science lab please?

B: Sorry, what's that?

A: Well, it looks like a cone, and it's made of glass.

It's used for pouring liquids into other containers.

B: Oh I see. I think we call that el embudo. Where is it?

A: It's in the science lab. Get a glass one please.

B: Ok, no problem.

A: Thanks.

A: Hey Steve. Are you ok?

B: No. I'm so tired. And I left my things on the bus.

A: What things?

B: The um, you know . . . they are used for listening to music.

A: Earphones?

B: No. The big kind. They look like earmuffs.

A: You mean headphones?

B: Yeah, that's it. They were really nice.

A: You need some sleep!

WHAT DOES IT LOOK LIKE?

espresso maker

A: Are you going to buy something for Mark's birthday?

B: Actually I got him something last week.

A: Nice what did you get?

B: I don't know if it has a special name but it's used for making espresso.

A: Oh nice. I want to get an espresso maker. What does it look like?

B: It's made of metal and it sits on the stove top. It's good for making one cup of coffee at a time.

A: I think that's Italian.

B: Yeah, Mark will really like it.

A: You know my birthday is going to be next month . . .

A: Hi. Did anyone turn in some glasses?

B: Actually we have a lot of glasses here.

A: Mine are round and made of metal. They aren't very dark.

B: These?

A: No. Mine were a little bigger.

B: These?

A: No, mine weren't so nice.

B: Here, take a look. These are all the glasses we have.

A: Hmm. I don't see them. Ok, thanks anyway.

B: Sure, no problem.
