About the Worksheet

I actually found something very similar to this online a few years ago and only recently when I went back looking for it I was totally unable to find it. Oddly enough I think I also made my own version of it in a simplified form. The original was a bit complicated and I needed something a little easier at the time. Unfortunately the file was so old it refused to open and so I went back to the drawing board to bring you this worksheet.

Using the Worksheet in Class

Set up the students with a conversation about family. Something simple like “Do you have any brothers or sisters? “ Usually does the trick. Listen and offer correction especially where some of the vocabulary is concerned.

If they look like they might need it, hop back in and introduce this worksheet as a bit of practice. Students can do this in pairs or alone but pairs are best. Use the clues at the bottom of the page to find out everyone’s name. Check your answers and then hop back into a new conversation with a new topic.
