

Word Find:

To the teacher:

Most of the time it's not a great idea to play games in class. They tend to take up time that could be better spent in other ways. There are students that really take to games and having them play some outside of class could be a fun way for them to enjoy playing with the language.

How to play:

Give each student a square and a time limit in which to find as many words as possible of any length more than two letters. (pictured) Multiple words may count. So in the example below, the students should find the words tote, and totes. those both count.

Scoring:

Scoring is based on the number of words found. One point per word.

Heads up:

It might be a good idea for you to try one or two just to see how much of a challenge it can be and see if it's right for your students.

Who it's for:

High functioning students.

After the games:

1. Have students talk about the game and gaming in general and what sorts of games they like to play.
2. After the games collect the words the students have found and make sure everyone understands their meaning. Drill some example sentences.
